CRUSHED & RESTORED COKE CAN

AS PERFORMED BY DAVID BLAINE ON T.V SPECIAL 'VERTIGO'

EFFECT:

You show an opened, emptied and crushed coke can. Upon your command the can slowly restores itself, making noises as all the dents disappear. You heal the hole in the top simply by passing your hand over it, so that the can is once again sealed and healed and looks like new! Now you open the can with a pfzzzt! and the filled can is emptied into a glass with real original coke pouring out!

- Can be performed with any fizzy drinks can!
- Gets an amazing reaction every time!
- Impromptu, very little setup required
- Only one can is used, no switch!
- Can be examined and/or kept by a spectator
- Reputation maker, become the talk of the town

THE SECRET:

There are no switches involved in this trick. The trick is entirely self contained all you need is an ordinary fizzy drinks can. The trick makes use of Carbon Dioxide found inside these types of drinks. I use Coke or Pepsi as these fizzy drinks seem to contain the most Carbon Dioxide.

PREPARATION:

1. EMPTYING THE CAN

Hold a normal full Coke or Pepsi can upside down in the sink. Make a small pinhole approximately 10mm (1/2 inch) from the top of the can with a needle or tip of a sharp knife.

Pic 1 (The top being the part you normally drink from) Try to find a place that hides the hole as good as possible. There is normally a place in the pattern of the can which will help camouflage the tiny hole ie. A dark part of the pattern. (BEWARE) The fizzy drink inside will squirt out of the can at high pressure! Try to empty the can by about one third. When there is about two thirds of drink left in the can, turn it gently the right way up so that it stops squirting out.

2. CRUSHING THE CAN

Now squeeze the can so that it looks crushed and the fizzy drink fills the can up to the needle hole. Make the dents as soft as possible so that the power of the Carbon Dioxide does not crack the can later when you 'restore' it. Simply try to press the can together by the sides so that it gets a 'waist' Pic 3.

3. MAKING THE CAN SEEM OPENED

Colour a piece of paper napkin black with a felt pen. Cut the napkin to the shape of the can opening. Then simply attach this black hole with some water or saliva to where the hole would be if the can were open Pic 3. The can now looks opened, emptied and crushed. Another way to make the can look opened is to turn the can up side down and hold the flame from a lighter at a small distance from the can. Soot will collect in the opening (do this before emptying the can) Wipe the edges clean with your fingers or a napkin and there you have a convincing black hole. It's easy to wipe this away with your fingers when 're-sealing' the can.

HANDLING TIP

When the can is prepared, you have to experiment with how to handle it. You must be able to handle it effortlessly as it is supposed to be empty. You can swing it around and even lie it on its side, if the hole is upwards. DO NOT cover the hole with your fingers, this will start the expansion too soon. Also DO NOT feel the need to seal the hole after preparing to avoid dripping. The slightest movement will then start the expansion.

RESTORING THE CAN

To restore the can simply adjust the grip of your hand so your thumb covers the small hole. If you now tense your arm so the fizzy drink starts to shake with a small movement (looking like you are concentration really hard), the Carbon Dioxide will expand the can to its original state (or very close to it!) Hold your thumb tightly against the hole to stop any squeaking noises. Then sweep your second and third fingers across the 'open' hole and secretly remove the small piece of napkin (or wipe off the soot), making it look as though you have healed the hole.

Now you can actually open the can with the 'pfzzzt' sound (remember to keep you thumb on the small hole while doing this or the 'pfzzzt' will not happen!) and empty the contents either into your mouth, or on the floor, or into a glass if you have one handy. You can then give the can away to one of your spectators, no one will find the small hole and it shows the can as normal and not 'gaffed' in anyway. This will Give a greater impact to the trick.

PRESENTATION:

By far the best reactions from this effect is when it is done seemingly impromptu - ie you are walking down the street with friend's, see an empty can and shout "Excellent a recyclable can" pick the can up and perform the effect. When finished and they are startled you say "Well how to you recycle then?" Obviously you have to prepare the can well in advance. Carbonated drinks will stay carbonated for a surprisingly long time, as long as they are kept perfectly still. So it is possible to load the prepared can ahead of time, in any location you know that you will walk past again. For example beside a dustbin, in a bush in the park or beside the foot of stairs etc.

Another idea is not to crush the can ahead of time, instead you pretend to empty the last drops in your mouth or in a glass by letting go of the small hole as you tip the can. That way the 'last drops' will leak out (from the hole) and further sell the 'emptiness' of the can. You can then proceed to crush the can in full view of the spectators and then restore it! David Blaine performed this trick with a beer can. The creamy foam produced by some beers suggests that the can has been violently shaken so i would avoid using beer so as not to give the secret away!
